

6516206238.txt

I began using XM's services about 5 months ago and find it a breath of fresh air not having to listen to all of the garbage on "free" radio. It's amazing to me that the FCC would even be considering restricting traffic and weather information on "PAY" services. There will always be a market for local stations providing these free services. I choose to listen to XM to have control of when I want to get the information, not when the stations decided to give it to me. I am willing to pay for such services and can't fathom why the FCC would restrict this from my PAY services.

Please let the free market rule, not Clear Channel and other mega media companies trying to use the FCC to keep their market audience.

Thank you.

Joe Janney